E. Jönsson is the last independent knife maker in the town of Mora, a town synonymous with knife manufacture the world over. The company started out in the 1930s as 'Bröderna Jönsson', or the 'Brothers Jönsson', changing its name when it was taken over by Erik, a son of one of the original brothers. Erik and his cousin, Holger, run the company and they are in their 70's and 90's respectively. It's proper old school – no computer, just an ancient typewriter plinking away in the office from time to time! A company with a good traditional story behind it. A small factory indeed, but in many ways offers more in the way of soul than the mass produced knives of its much larger neighbour. Carbon steel with a scandi grind, birch handles painted red and a plastic sheath. Simple, classic Swedish work knives. They also do a range of scout knives for the younger adventurers, including a safety knife with a blunt tip for the littlest woodsman.

Reindeer Hides

Since ancient times, the indigenous Sami people, who herd the reindeer, have been using every part of the animal for food, tools, clothing, storage bags and even hut building.

Today, pelts are essentially a by-product of producing meat. These hides come from Scandinavian reindeer that have grazed freely in the Northern Arctic region of Lapland.

These fine tanned reindeer hides are available in a standard version mainly used for decoration and a silicone treated version for added water resistance on the meat side. The coated hides can be used when camping, in a tent or hammock as well as just on a bench or chair in the garden. However be mindful that the secret of the warmth of reindeer hides is also their weakness - each hair is filled with what can be described as small air bubbles creating amazing insulation also making the hair sensitive to breakage and shedding. Because of this, it is not recommended to walk on reindeer hides and using them outdoors

It is also recommended that you avoid leaving the hides in humid conditions for long. After use outdoors and when stored, it should be allowed to dry and preferably be rolled out with the hair down to allow air to reach all parts of the hide - this helps prevent shedding. The colouring can vary from almost white to darkish brown. Approx dimensions are 100-120cm long by 60-100cm wide.

Returns due to shedding will not be accepted!

COMPACT SHARPENERS

Flex for SwingBlade, Gut openers or tripe knives

Sharpening an inverse grind such as the SwingBlade belly opener has always been a problem. This sharpener makes this much easier. This diamond sharpener (9x2 cm) has a coarse and a fine surface applied to a very thin flexible metal plate. By placing your thumb on the back of the sharpener and applying light pressure against the blade the plate will adapt to the shape of the blade. By moving the sharpener along the length of the grind the edge is brought back.
